C. OF C. PRESIDENT MAKES PLEA FOR LOCAL CLUBS TO GIVE SUPPORT

Urges Earnest Co-operation In Talk to Members of Real Estate Board

By RALPH A. LYND
Of The Evening News Staff

A PLEA for earnest co-operation between the various Glendale organizations, especially between the Glendale Chamber of Commerce and the Glendale Realty Board, was made by Jesse E. Smith, president of the Chamber of Commerce, at the weekly luncheon of the Realty Board at the C. & S. Cafeteria yesterday, when he spoke in an effort to clear up several slight misunderstandings that have arisen between the two bodies recently.

"Every local organization," declared Mr. Smith, "has a definite plan of activity to follow in carrying out the objects for which it was formed, and it must confine itself primarily to its own tasks, rather than follow a course that would lead to overlapping the activities of some other body. The Chamber of Commerce is, in the very nature of things, the organization most vital to the city's needs, and it should have the support of every man in the city if it is to carry out its plans for Glendale's development. Any conflict that arises between the Chamber of Commerce and other bodies tends to plunge the organizations involved into chaos and to destroy the work of such associations."

Prospects Confused

In dealing with the question of furnishing the members of the Realty Board with copies of letters that are received at the Chamber of Commerce and that could be considered of interest to the real estate men of the city, Mr. Smith declared that such communications, if a logical policy in the matter were pursued, would be open to every real estate man who is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, no matter whether he is a member of the Realty Board or not, and this would mean that every prospect who inquired about conditions here would be swamped with answers to his letter and would be confused in making his decision, with the result that he would be scared away from the city rather than drawn to it. The board of

FAVOR AMENDMENT

Iron Doors Charged With Electricity to Guard Tut Mummy

LUXOR, Egypt, Feb. 22.—The most modern of safeguards, including great iron doors charged with electricity, will be utilized to keep off grave robbers when the 3,000 year old tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen is resealed by Lord Carnarvon's Egy; tologist exploration party, it was learned today.

These precautions will be in addition to the tons of limestone that will be poured over the ancient burial shrine.

The tourists have been so many, with increased revenue for the Egyptian government as a result, that Egyptian officials have requested that the tomb be kept open for another week.

Among the latest visitors were Paris and London dress designers, seeking ideas. They said they expected the "Tut-Ankh-Amen gown" to be the rage later in the year. It will be a long robe with flowing skirts.

Scientists on the ground are scarcely taking time to eat or sleep, so absorbed are they in the discoveries. While no papyrus has been found, it is believed some of the sealed chambers contain records which will throw interesting light upon Egyptian life in the days of Tut-Ankh-Amen, ten centuries before the coming of Christ.

SHOW SOME JAZZ! CHEW GUM! TIP TO MA AND PA

Gayer Hats, Red Neckties May Help to Keep Up With Young Folks

"We must put on gayer hats and red neckties and we must chew gum if necessary to make pa and ma part of the social recreation of Twentieth Century high school boys and girls," was the hint given Glendale parents yesterday afternoon by E. D. De Groot of Los Angeles, social worker and Boy Scout executive, in addressing the Glendale Union High School Parent-Teacher association at the school.

Mr. De Groot was introduced to speak on "Recreation for High School Boys and Girls," and he began by stating that never in the history of the world has there been so much time for recreation as at the present.

Shorter Hours, More Pay.

"The scale of receration has grown to enormous proportions," said the speaker. "The recreations of our boys and girls are bewildering.

"Don't you recall the days of limited consumption and unlimited labor, when we were boys and girls? That old doctrine, along with many others, has passed, and today the whole world is on a strike for shorter hours and more pay. All this has affected the children..

"Young people of today know no bounds in social recreation. The needs and development of their physical recreation is met by the modern school and allied organizations. But it is their social recreation that appals us.

Must Gain Confidence.

"It is the duty of the parents to gain the confidence of the boys and girls as to their leisure time interests. The modern home does not lend itself to social recreation of the boys and girls, but it is up to the parents to make themselves part of this recreation, whether in the home or out."

The appreciation of Mr. De Groot's informal talk was shown

RECOVERS BONDS OF LOOTED BANK

Detective Gets $209,000 in Securities Taken From Warren National

WARREN, Mass., Feb. 22—The looting of the First National bank here of $209,000 in negotiable securities was cleared up by the locating of the bonds at Buffalo, N. Y., according to John A. Packard, New England agent of the William J. Burns force, who brought about the arrest of the bank's president, Frank L. Taylor.

The bonds located at Buffalo were disposed of there by Joseph B. Marcino, alleged "master mind." Marcino, according to Packard, has wrecked at least six banks in this country during the past year and is wanted in France, Italy and other European countries for similar operations. He was several times forced to flee his native land, Italy, according to Packard, who termed him "one of the most notorious bank wreckers in the world."

Waives Extradition

A United States marshal will be sent to Chicago to bring back Taylor, who is said to have waived extradition proceedings.

Detectives have been sent to a South American port, according to Packard, and Marcino's arrest may be reported within a few days.

Marcino, Packard stated, usually operated with "tools." Philadelphia, Chicago and a California city were among the other places where Marcino wrecked banks, and, in some instances, employed "tools," according to Packard. Marcino secured more than $800,000 through his bank operations, Packard estimated.

TRIO OF SERVICES FOR DEDICATION OF NEW CHURCH

Impressive Ceremonies to Be Held Sunday at Home of Congregationalists

An outstanding event in the development of Glendale church activities will be the dedication Sunday of the fine new building of the Congregational church at the northwest corner of Central and Wilson avenues.

It will be a full day for the local church people, who will have guests from all parts of southern California for the three dedicatory services.

There will be three services during the day, but the dedicatory ceremony will take place in the afternoon with Rev. Daniel F. Fox, D. D., of Pasadena, giving the sermon of dedication.

Service Sunday Morning.

Rev. C. M. Calderwood, pastor of the church, is to be the speaker at the regular morning worship, and Rev. Frank Dyer, pastor of the Wilshire Congregational church in Los Angeles, will be the speaker at the regular evening service.

The first service of the day will be at the usual hour, 10:30 o'clock in the morning. After the prelude, the singing of the "Doxology" and the invocation, the church quartet will sing "Lord God of Morning" (Gailbreth). Members of the quarter are Mrs. Walter Q. Widdows, Mrs. Howard E. Cavanah, Howard E. Cavanah and Myron Carman.

Then there will be a responsive reading, Number 19, "Gloria Patria," scripture from Isaiah 60 and prayer.

A solo, "Open the Gates of the Temple" (Knapp), by Howard E. Cananah, tenor; an anthem, "Praise the Lord" (Watson), and a hymn, "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord," will precede the sermon by Reverend Calderwood.

Singing of the hymn "In Loud Exalted Strains" and the benediction will close the service.

Dedicatory Service.

The hour of the afternoon dedicatory service is announced as 3 o'clock. After a prelude the congregation is to sing, "The Church's One Foundation." This will be followed by an anthem, "Behold Now, Praise the Lord" (Ickes).

Greetings will be brought by Rev. Henry I. Rasmus, pastor of the First Methodist church of Glendale; Rev. Carl S. Patton of Los Angeles; Rev. James H. Lash of Hollywood, and Rev. E. Morgan Isaac of Eagle Rock.

Then there will be an anthem, "Great Is the Lord" (Liston), and reading of the scripture dedication First Chronicles 28:9, 10; 29:1,-10; and Second Chronicles 6:1, 18; 40, 41.

SHIP SUBSIDY BILL SAILS IN FLOOD OF ORATORY

'Battalion Of Death' Continues Rain Of Words To Wreck Measure

FIGHTS RIGHT OF SENATOR TO SEAT

Opponent of E. B. Mayfield Challenges by Petition; Brings in Ku Klux

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—A petition protesting against the right of Senator-elect Earle B. Mayfield, Democrat, of Texas, to occupy his seat in the United States senate, was filed here today by attorneys for George E. Peddy, his opponent in the November election.

The challenge of Mayfield's right to sit was coupled with a request for a recount of the votes cast in the November election.

Numerous charges were made in the lengthy petition, comprising some 20,000 words. The petition charged that Mayfield participated in a conspiracy with the Ku Klux Klan and various state and county officials, the ultimate effect of which was Peddy's votes were miscounted and his name was refused a place on the ballots.

The petition also charged that Mayfield and his supporters spent for campaign purposes more than $150,000 in violation of the Texas corrupt practices act, and that because of this alleged violation, Mayfield's name was not entitled to go on the ballots at all, as under Texas law violations of the corrupt practices act deprive the candidate of any right to have his name printed on the ballot.

Denounces Klan

The petition also challenged Mayfield's personal qualifications. A considerable section of the petition was devoted to a scathing denouncement of the Ku Klux Klan and its methods.

The petition was filed in the office of Vice President Coolidge, from whence it was carried to the presiding officer of the senate, Senator McNary, Republican, of Oregon, and by him referred to the secretary of the senate.

Rawlinson Compromise In Dancer's Suit, Report

Only Ten Legislative Days Remain; Supply of Talks Unlimited, Claim

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The ship subsidy bill, although officially displaced from its preferred position as the "unfinished business" of the senate, was sailing through the same rough waters today as the coalition "battalion of death" continued a filibuster against its passage.

Supporters of the measure were in a slightly stronger position as a result of strategic maneuvers which enabled them to finally enact the army appropriation bill, the last of the great government supply measures, which had been caught behind the legislative jam caused by the filibuster.

The parliamentary tactics, however, forced the administration leaders to face two test votes before the subsidy can again be brought under senatorial consideration. A motion by Senator Jones, Republican, Washington, to take up the subsidy again was pending when the senate convened, but leaders of the filibuster announced they would immediately vote to substitute the Ladd "filled milk" bill.

In Former Position

This brought the subsidy back to practically the same position it occupied yesterday but with the army supply bill out of the way. If the administration can defeat the Ladd motion, it can also return the subsidy to its preferred position. Administration leaders predicted a majority vote on both sides.

The "battalion of death" continued optimistic, its leaders announcing that they had no intention of delaying or preventing passage of the great supply bill.

With only ten legislative days remaining before adjournment, the filibusters declared they had seventy hours of speeches yet to be made against its enactment. This supply of orations, speeches, addresses and talks, they said, will carry the filibuster up to March 4.

With hundreds storming the senate galleries for admission, the spectacular filibuster rolled merrily on its way this afternoon.

Warfare Continues

With a dozen filibusterers ready to renew their efforts, the "battalion of death" rested at the opening of today's session. Washington's farewell address was first read in commemoration of his birthday anniversary. Then Senator Gooding, Republican, Idaho, in favor of the subsidy, took the LOS ANGELES, Feb. 22.—Arthur J. Waters, one of the foremost bankers of the southwest section of the United States, died today at the Good Samaritan hospital. An operation was performed several weeks ago, but Mr. Waters' strength apparently was not sufficient to enable him to rally from the effects.

Arthur J. Waters was born in Chicago in 1871. His father was Russell J. Waters, the then president of the Citizens' National Bank.

CONFERENCE OVER NATION'S ABILITY TO BUILD ARMY UP TO FIGHT

Red Flag Paper in Berlin Says Plans Are Under Way; Russian Threats

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—The communist newspaper Rote Fahne (red flag) declared today that Germany has begun to make preparations for war. According to the newspaper, Chancellor Wilhelm Cuno, minister of defense, and General Von Zeekt, of the German military police, "participated in a meeting at which Germany's war capacity was discussed."

Rote Fahne said General Von Zeekt told his colleagues it was possible to build up an army along the lines of the "orgesch."

He recommended that all possible munitions be placed at the disposal of the "orgesch," as in the upper Silesian fighting between Germans and Poles.

(The "orgesch" is a national organization formed in Germany three years ago for the "protection of national interests." France protested against the "orgesch" on the ground it was a military organization, devoted to the training of future soldiers. This was vigorously denied by the Germans.)

According to Rote Fahne, General Von Zeekt demanded that civil officials "help in the war preparations."

The German officer was quoted as advising that arrest of communist leaders cease.

Rote Fahne, in commenting upon the alleged military plans, declares that the workers must not be misled. It added:

"These preparations are being made against the workers. Let the workers be on guard."

Chancellor Cuno denied the Rote Fahne's allegation.

"It is untrue that Germans are preparing for war," said the chancellor. "They could not do so."

Inter-allied officials minimized the importance of the Rote Fahne's statements and said they had every confidence in the German ministers.

It is regarded as significant, however, that the Reichswehr is issuing "officer character" certificates to former soldiers. Communists allege that a "reserve officers' corps" is thus being built up through the officers of the Reichswehr.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The coalition "battalion of death," which for four days has blocked the legislative wheels of congress in fighting enactment of the administration ship subsidy bill, this afternoon flung all pretense aside to openly acknowledge it was filibustering. Replying to Republican inquiries, Senator McKellars and Reed not only admit they were filibustering but declared there were six Republicans and nearly all the Democrats in the senate who are pledged individually and collectively to defeat the subsidy by every means possible.

GIVES TALK ABOUT IMPORTANCE OF HARMONIZING

Tells Realty Board Members Of Policy; Bus System Up for Discussion

directors of the Chamber of Commerce has decided, Mr. Smith said, that, while the organization is anxious to cooperate in every way with the Glendale Realty Board, it would be better to permit the prospects to make their own selection of a real estate firm, rather than have them bombarded with scores of letters from dealers.

Forget Differences

"We can stand strong against any outside influences that would seek to destroy Glendale," declared Mr. Smith, "but the real danger is that we may be destroyed by forces operating from within. Let us show ourselves to be larger than the little personal differences that have existed in the past and work together for a bigger and better Glendale, one that will overcome the elements that would wreck the city of which we are all so proud and in whose future we have such confidence."

George H. Bentley, one of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce, spoke briefly, adding his plea to that of President Smith for closer cooperation between that organization and the Glendale Realty Board.

Gulick Tells Policy

C. D. Gulick, representing the Southern Pacific Bus company, addressing the board, asked for the support of the members both inside and outside of Glendale in his project to furnish motor bus transportation for the people of this city, and declared that his company does not intend to enter into competition with the transportation companies that are already serving Glendale with the object of running them out of business. His company, he stated, would find its patrons among the overload that the present companies are carrying and in the new field that is growing steadily here for additional transportation companies, as new residents come to Glendale daily.

Mr. Gulick reiterated his former statements that his company is not, in any sense, desirous of offering stock for sale to the people of Glendale, except to the owners of subdivisions and of outlying property who will be directly benefited by having a regular bus service passing their property and thus raising its potential value and offering another selling point. These property owners, said Mr. Gulick, have already assured him of their readiness to invest in the stock of his company and to become financially interested in the the development of adequate transportation to serve the needs of purchasers who may build homes in such districts.

Rev. E. L. Shaw, who is associated with Mr. Gulick, also urged the members of the Realty Board to get behind the project and to lend it their moral support with a view to providing better transportation service and to work for lower fares than are now in effect. The perfecting of a better transportation system to and from this city, Rev. Shaw declared, would advertise Glendale more than any other agency and would result in distinct financial benefit to everyone here.

Advertising Campaign

The question of advertising Glendale in a series of full-page advertisements in a Los Angeles newspaper, as has been done by other cities in Southern California, was discussed at length, and it was decided to run a series of advertisements covering a period of twelve weeks at $400 for each issue. The money to pay for this advertising is to be raised, if present plans mature, by having several of the local clubs and civic bodies agree to underwrite a share of the cost. The organizations that are to be asked to support the project are the Glendale Realty Board, which has already agreed to stand its share, the Glendale Chamber of Commerce, the Glendale Credit association, the Kiwanis, Rotary and Exchange clubs, the City of Glendale and, if possible, the committee in charge of the coming Merchants Industrial Exposition.

The Chamber of Commerce has also indorsed the plan and has agreed to devote a part of the funds derived from the exposition to advertising Glendale, although it was stated by W. L. Twining, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce publicity and advertising committee, that the entire amount so received could not be devoted to this object, as plans are being considered for spending part of it through other publicity channels.

Seek Co-operation

Representatives of the Glendale Realty Board are appearing this week before the other clubs and bodies mentioned and are asking their co-operation in the plan, and it is understood that the failure of the other organizations to agree to shoulder a proportionate share of the cost will make the Realty Board's guarantee of its share null and void.

No definite figures could be submitted on behalf of any of the other bodies whose interest the Realty Board is endeavoring to enlist, but full details will be available by the next weekly meeting of the board, when the plan, if it is adopted at all, will be put in motion and Glendale will be advertised in full-page displays that are certain to draw many more residents to the city.

Four Reasons Why You Should Buy Your Ford Car This Month

I.

The unprecedented demand for Ford Cars throughout the winter months has taken the entire output of the Ford plants working at capacity, indicating that the demand this Spring will be far in excess of the number of Ford Cars that can possibly be built.

II.

January was the tenth consecutive month in which retail deliveries exceeded 100,000 Ford Cars and Trucks. Requirements for February, the month when preparations are already under way for Spring business, called for 148,407 Cars and Trucks—more than 24,000 in excess of the number we can possibly produce.

III.

Ford dealers in many parts of the country are already finding it necessary to specify future delivery dates on Ford Products because there are no reserve stocks to draw from.

IV.

Your order placed now will protect you against delay or disappointment later on—It is the only way you can be assurred of reasonably prompt delivery.

We consider it important to give you these facts, so that if you are planning to purchase a Ford Car, Truck or Fordson Tractor for use this Spring or Summer you can list your order at once and take advantage of our dealer's first opportunity to make delivery.

McElroy died on the operating table at the receiving hospital at 8 o'clock after surgeons had worked five hours to save his life. His wife was at his side when death came. The other woman of the triangle was not present.

Ancestry of Tut-Ankh-Amen Traced by California College Savant

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 22.—It is only a bit of white limestone—less than two and one-half inches long—bearing some queer marks.

Yet it reveals one of the most appealing love stories of all history and provides the background for the reign of King Tut-Ankh-Amen, Egyptian Pharoah, whose tomb just now is giving up priceless historical treasures.

It is the marriage scarab of King Amen-Hotep III, father of Tut-Ankh-Amen, the only one in the United States, and rests on a shelf at the Museum of Anthropology of the University of California here.

Sister-marriage was the unviolated practice of the Egyptian royal family until King Amen-Hotep III married Tii—Bedja woman and Syrian, a commoner. She was the beautiful daughter of a captain of his father's guard. He fell in love with her—a great love—which could only be satisfied by making her queen, his first wife.

Trace Love Tale

Tut-Ankh-Amen was not the son of Tii, according to Professor H. F. Lutz, Egyptologist of the University of California, who deciphered the hieroglyphs on the tiny scarab and traced the love tale through the mazes of ancient Egyptian history. Amen-Hotep III had a large harem and Tut-Ankh-Amen was the son of one of these commoner wives.

Tut-Ankh-Amen rose to the kingship not by virtue of his father but by marriage. He married the third daughter of Amen-Hotop IV, his half brother, thereby making the half brother his father-in-law.

BLAME BURGLARY ON DOPE SEEKER

Medicine Bottles in Store Searched for Drugs, Evidence Shows

Search for narcotics is believed to have inspired the attempted burglary early last night of a new drug store which is being established at the northwest corner of Verdugo road and Colorado street.

Mrs. D. E. Johnston of 1307 East Colorado street, saw someone in the store last night but thought that it was the proprietor.

Entry was gained through a side door which was unlocked after a pane of glass in it had been broken. Blood stains were left by the burglar who is believed to have cut his hand in the process.

Although nothing was stolen, medicine bottles were considerably disturbed in what is believed to have been a search for "dope." As none of this was on hand, the burglar was obliged to go away empty handed.

Pageant Queen to Take Choice of Rich Prizes

The winner of the contest for Queen of the Pageant that is now under way in connection with Glendale's Merchants' Industrial Exposition, to be held here from May 25 to June 3, may take her choice between a prize of a piano or a diamond ring, according to Harry L. Leavitt, director general of the exposition. All that is necessary for anyone to do who wishes to enter the contest is to submit her name and her photograph to Mr. Leavitt at his office in the Monarch building on South Brand, and her name will be listed with those of the other contestants.

Entries are now coming in steadily for the contest, and it is expected that the time between now and the date set for the exposition will see a notable activity among the girls who are anxious to reign over the ten days' carnival as queen.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—A report from Paris that Great Britain is making further concessions to France in the Cologne military zone was formally denied by the foreign office today. According to this report, the British were giving up more territory and railways to the French.

British officials said that, on the contrary, the British were resisting the renewed requests of the French. They declared that the borders of the British area of military occupation on the Rhine are being adjusted in such a way that Britain is giving up less territory to France than was planned when the Le Trocquer-Bonar Law conference was held here last week.

"The situation is so delicate that the British are making preparations to withdraw from Cologne if any incidents take place," said a Cologne despatch to the Daily Expreses today.

It was understood that the cabinet had agreed to military withdrawal without a formal ministerial vote if conditions were arranged for immediate action.

The Germans are using all their efforts to keep the British on the Rhine.

Supporters of Bonar Law have been notified to keep in closer touch with events, as the situation has become so tense that developments of grave importance may take place at any time.

After outlining some of the troubles facing Europe, the premier continued:

"If the United States could participate in peace as she did in war, it would be better for the world. But I believe the truth has begun to enter the minds of Americans.

"There must be co-operation and amity between the English-speaking countries. I feel that it is not too much to hope that an actual working union between the United States and Great Britain will come soon."

Premier Bonar Law eulogized the memory of George Washington, saying:

"It is a tribute to British magnanimity that we can look upon Washington, who took a great republic away from us, not as a British enemy at all."

by hearty applause and by a rising vote of thanks from the P.-T. A. members.

Preceding Mr. De Groot a short business session was directed by Mrs. W. Q. Widdows, president. The outstanding action of this part of the meeting was the decision of the P.-T. A. to purchase two dozen red and black sweaters and felt caps to match for the high school band to wear at public appearances. The band boys are to buy the khaki trousers and puttees to complete the uniform.

Buy Band Sweaters.

The P.-T. A. has always taken a faithful interest in the school band, and the suggestion from Normal Hayhurst that the association buy the band sweaters was heartily received and acted on favorably.

Mrs. P. L. Hatch and W. H. Burns were appointed to confer with Mr. Hayhurst as to the size, type and number of sweaters and as to their handling after purchase.

An announcement of interest was made by Mrs. A. M. Rowe who is to be Sallie Hardscrabble, in charge of the general store, tomorrow at the P.-T. A. Federation bazaar. Every high school student is to bring some article for sale in the store, and Mrs. Rowe, in the costume she is to wear tomorrow, visited all the school rooms today to announce the store and interest the pupils.

Tells About Bazaar.

Mrs. L. T. Rowley also spoke of the bazaar plans, particularly of the cake contest. She urged all women present to bake a cake for entry. All cakes must be at the bazaar not later than Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The P.-T. A. company enjoyed as part of the afternoon's program, two selections by the thirty-eight-piece orchestra, directed by Mrs. Dora L. Gibson. They played "Foolish Dance" and the "Toreador Song" from "Carmen."

Suppose George Washington Would Return To Preside At Nation's Capital Once More?

MODERN statesmen today differed in their opinions on what would happen if George Washington were to return from the Valhalla of American heroes to preside anew over the nation which he founded. The interesting views of two rival party leaders, Senator Watson, Republican, Indiana, and Senator Walsh, Democrat, Mass., one of the Democratic leaders in the senate, have been written expressly for and copyrighted, 1923, by International News Service.

No Change In Views On Foreign Policy, Says Watson

By JAMES E. WATSON
Of Indiana, one of the Republican leaders of the senate. Written expressly for and copyrighted, 1923, by International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The granite-like character of Washington, his belief in the enduring quality of established principles, his thorough understanding of the fundamentals of our government and his iron-will when in the pursuit of justifiable ends, would compel him, if living today, to espouse the same theories of government as these which were the cherished objects of his regard during his entire career.

He would still advocate the perpetuity of the United States and the surest instrumentalities for effectuating the ultimate aims of our people; the maintenance of the constitution, and the enforcement of all law as essential to the preservation of both union and constitution. We would all hear his voice warning us against the seductive influences of the political demagogue seeking to take advantage of popular clamor to further his own personal ends.

No Reason to Change

Across the intervening decades we yet hear his commanding tones, admonishing us that in our relations with other governments we should "observe good faith and justice toward all nations, and cultivate peace and harmony with all."

Having in view all that has transpired in European history from his day to ours can we think of any reason that would impel Washington to change his views or alter his opinions with respect to our essential relations with the governments of that continent.

The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations, he said, is in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connections as possible.

Foreign Relations to Be Settled First, States Walsh

By THOMAS P. WALSH
Democratic Senator from Massachusetts, senate leader. Written expressly for and copyrighted, 1923, by International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—If George Washington was with us today, and chief executive of our country, he would first settle all our foreign relations. He would have our government restored to peaceful and amicable relations with every country in the world.

He would remind them of our own difficulties and struggles in establishing this republic and impress upon them that America stands ready to extend the same friendship we received from friendly nations in the dark hours when we were groping for a stable form of government.

He would reiterate the doctrine he espoused in the early days of this country when he gave warning of the danger of foreign alliances and entanglements.

He would give America's wholehearted sympathy to peoples striving to establish orderly government.

Economic Assistance

Yes, he would even tender them economic assistance, if necessary, to stabilize their institutions and to promote peace and prosperity; but he would have our government take no position to perpetuate power by force, and he would raise his voice in denunciation of the practice of burdening the people of the world with taxes to maintain military supremacy and naval armament.

The world needs Washington; America needs him, at least the spirit of Washington—his sincerity of purpose, his high idealism, his knowledge of government, and the relations of governments to each other, as well as the relation of democratic governments to their people.

BRITISH DEBATE WOMEN'S WORK

Authorities Argue Theory Home Life Is Chief Sphere for Wives

By F. A. WRAY
For International News Service

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Should married women work? is one of the questions now agitating the British nation.

"It depends a great deal on the woman, and a great deal on the career," says Dr. Mary Scharlieb, pioneer woman physician.

"A woman should certainly not follow a profession that takes her permanently out of her home, or makes such demands upon her time that she cannot attend adequately to domestic responsibilities.

A woman can be a writer, a lecturer, a doctor or a musician and still maintain a reasonable measure of home life.

"I am convinced of this, because I have had personal experience of its feasibility.

Position Difficult

"A married woman, however, who goes out to work in a shop, or similar employment, is in a very different position. She must rise early, be at her place of business not later than 9 as a rule and returns home so late as to practically preclude normal family intercourse.

"Let women, wherever possible, choose suitable professions, and there will be nothing incompatible with the married state."

Miss Barbara Hoffe, well-known actress, is absolutely opposed to married women working.

"Decidedly not," she says. "A married woman should devote herself to her husband if she wants her home to be a happy one in the truest sense.

"The hundred and one things to be done about a house—looking after the home, ordering meals, bringing up children—can only properly be done by a wife; besides, the mere fact of the wife having done them will please the husband.

"When a man comes home after a day's work he often wants to discuss his affairs with his wife; but if the wife has been out all day, as well, following her profession, she will not want to listen to him. She will want to talk business, too, and the result will simply be petty quarrels, which, as all the world knows, are a frequent source of unhappy married life.

"Finally, I think, often the professional woman loses more of her femininity than any woman can afford to lose."

Favors Liberty

Miss Phyllis Monkman, famous singer, thinks that women should be allowed to do as they like in the matter.

"Let women work and have complete liberty in working," she says.

"Of course, if a woman has children she must give up as much of her work as will allow her to show them proper attention, but beyond that there is nothing whatever to be said against the married woman following a career.

"If the husband is a man of slender means, then work for the woman is a very good thing, indeed, for then a little money can be set aside for pleasure, and the entire income be not absorbed in providing the bare necessaries of life.

"But, over and above these points, a woman should, wherever possible, have something to interest her in the outside world.

"So far from creating morbid and romantic tendencies, it broadens the mind."

May Sinclair favors the idea of careers for married women.

"I certainly think," she says, "that a career for a woman, when she is fitted for it, is a very good thing, whether she be married or single.

"Naturally, the husbands, I suppose, would prefer their wives to stay at home—although, not being a husband I cannot speak authoritatively.

"Present-day conditions make it more necessary than in past years for a woman to follow a profession, and, in addition, it encourages early marriages, which is a good thing.

"Careers for married women have undoubtedly been a great success in the United States."

Depends on Woman

Miss Sybil Thorndike, famous tragic actress, who is married and has some bonnie children of her own, thinks that the question depends entirely upon the woman.

"If the woman has a profession to which years of study and work have been devoted," she says, "she should not be expected to give it up upon marrying. If it means anything to her she will not throw it up."

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 22.—Tommy Milton and Jimmy Murphy, both champions, are expected to be the big feature Sunday when the 250-mile "Washington's birthday race" will be run at the Los Angeles speedway.

Murphy had declared himself satisfied with his workouts and had locked up his car till Sunday, having averaged 120 miles an hour.

Yesterday, however, Milton chalked up a record of 125 miles an hour, and Murphy said he had changed his mind. Both drivers were out today tuning up and reeling off lap after lap between 36 and 37 seconds flat. Thirty-six seconds is 125 miles an hour, while 37 seconds is 121.62 miles an hour. One second to a lap of a mile and a quarter means a difference in miles per hour of three and one third when it gets to be over two miles a minute.

Prisoner Makes Bad Money While in Cell

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 22.—Making twenty out of one—in dollars—is the latest achievement, if it is an achievement, of James F. Copeland, who is serving a one-year sentence for passing spurious money.

This last job was turned inside the prison walls and for the purpose of buying bootleg "narcotics" inside the prison, he confessed.

Woman's Alleged Confession Involves Husband in Death of Girls

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 22.—Following an alleged confession by Dimple Nix, negress, that her husband set fire to the home of John McDowell, Decatur, Ala., newspaper publisher, causing the deaths of McDowell's two daughters, Millie Matee and Marian the Nix woman, her husband, Johnny, and his brother, were rushed to the jail in Atlanta early today for safekeeping.

The Nix woman said revenge was the motive, according to Dekalb county authorities. The negress had been discharged as cook at the McDowell home. She said this incensed her husband.

At the jail Johnny Nix and his brother denied any knowledge of the crime. The two girls were burned to death in their beds Tuesday night.

The door to the room was found locked, indicating to police that the blaze was set by an incendiary.

The three negroes under arrest narrowly missed rough handling by a mob last night. Shortly after they were removed from the Dekalb county jail, a crowd of 100 men appeared at the door and demanded that all three be turned over to them.

Eternal Life in Next Life, Says C. Doyle

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Eternal youth exists across the Styx, according to Sir A. Conan Doyle.

"On the 'other side' there is no childbirth, no love in the grosser sense," says Sir Arthur. "There is marriage, in the sense of love, between man and wife. Children grow up at the same rate as here. Old people are rejuvenated, going back to their prime.

"A man who has been a 'good fellow' here will find all people to whom he has done good turns waiting to welcome him, but the miserable money-grubber will have to wander alone in the cold gray gloom."

Taylor, who was arrested in a flat here, where he had been living quietly since his flight from Warren, Mass., said today that he was merely a "catspaw" of Marcino's ring.

COMMUNITY SONG IDEA ADVOCATED

First Concert Will Be Held in High School On Next Monday Night

Alexander Mitchell, of 2041 Kenneth road, is interested in the community "sing" idea, which is more and more becoming a feature of the life of Glendale and other communities in Southern California.

Mr. Mitchell, who is a member of the music committee of the local community service organization, says:

"The opportunity of promoting the real 'get-together' spirit through community singing is something in which I have been much interested for some time. Many people will remember that Glendale promoted a series of these community 'sings' some time ago under the direction of that remarkable song leader, Hugo Kirchhoffer, which were enjoyed by many hundreds of Glendale residents. I have always regretted, as one of the prime movers in this project, that these events were discontinued, and I am very much gratified that through Glendale community service we are to be offered an opportunity to revive these community programs.

Community Spirit

"Through these 'sings' there is also an opportunity for an interchange of musical courtesies between neighboring communities. The music committee of Glendale community service has already received invitations from Hollywood and Fullerton to contribute talent to the 'sings' in these communities and it is planned that these and other communities shall participate in a like manner in our Glendale 'sings.'

"The first 'sing' is to be held next Monday night at the Glendale Union High school and we are hopeful that the program will bring out a large and enthusiastic audience."

National Capital in Tribute to Memory

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The machinery of government slowed down today in respect for the memory of George Washington. All government departments closed. Only on capitol hill, where the filibuster against the shipping bill continued, was there the usual activity.

Many government officials participated in patriotic exercises about the base of the towering shaft of the Washington monument, which began this morning.

TO HONOR WASHINGTON

DID you ever walk by shaded pathways through the grounds of the big ancestral home of the Washingtons and where the green slopes seek the waters of the peaceful Potomac, come upon Mt. Vernon's holy ground? As you looked through the gratings of the tomb at the sarcophagus that held the sacred dust of Washington, did you not feel kindled anew within you a patriotism and a zeal for the country he so firmly founded at so dear a cost?

The nation that gratefully remembers its great statesmen and martyrs and pays tribute to their memory is far from being a decadent nation. For years Washington's birthday and Lincoln's have been holidays. But is this enough? We may celebrate their birthdays by displaying the flag and by holding patriotic exercises, we may place flowers upon their tombs to symbolize the fragrance of their memory, but we may honor them more by loving our country more, by valuing more highly its institutions, by keeping its laws and by trying to advance its greatness and glory.

Today there is a growing tendency to belittle the constitution of the United States and there are many who consider it no shame to evade and disregard the laws. This is a dangerous tendency, for the constitution is the very foundation of our republic, and when we tear down the constitution we undermine the life of the nation. Not only are there those who break the law, but, many who would not do so themselves, look with good-natured tolerance upon those who do. Newspapers and magazines take the matter lightly and a sentiment has grown up that tends to consider the situation in the light of a joke. This condition of affairs is not only serious for us, but, when we thus discredit our dearly-purchased national institutions, we are heaping dishonor upon the name of Washington and the other patriotic statesmen who helped to found and preserve the nation.

It was George Washington himself who said, "Respect for the authority of the government, compliance with its laws, acquiescence in its measures, are duties enjoined by the fundamental maxims of true liberty. The basis of our political system is the right of the people to make and to alter their constitutions of government. The very idea of the power and the right of the people to establish government, presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government."

And so the best way to honor the memory of Washington today is to accept those truths and principles that make for good citizenship and to pledge anew our allegiance to our government and its institutions.

George Washington!
Guardian genius, great soldier, wise statesman, loved president anr patriot without reproach,
Pious, humane and just, commanding, dignified, of stainless honor, dauntless courage, kind and generous at heart,
God raised him up to lead a host against the despot's sway and found a world for freemen in the West.

How easy it would have been to have hesitated a moment in the window before he made his presence known—just long enough for Pesita to speak the single word that would have sent eleven bullets speeding into the body of the man who loved Barbara and whom Billy believed the girl loved. But did such a thought occur to Billy Byrne of Grand Avenue? It did not. He forgot every other consideration beyond his loyalty to a friend. Bridge and Pesita were looking at him in wide-eyed astonishment.

"Lay down your carbines!" Billy shot his command at the firing squad. "Lay 'em down or I'll bore Pesita. Tell 'em to lay 'em down, Pesita. I gotta bead on your beezer."

Pesita did as he was bid, his yellow face pasty with rage.

"Now their cartridge belts!" snapped Billy, and when these had been deposited upon the floor he told Bridge to disarm the bandit chief.

"Is Mr. Harding safe?" he asked of Bridge, and receiving an affirmative he called upstairs for the older man to descend.

As Mr. Harding reached the foot of the stairs Barbara entered the room by the window through which Billy had come—a window which opened upon the side veranda.

"Now we gotta hike," announced Billy. "It won't never be safe for none of you here after this, not even if you do think Villa's your friend—which he ain't the friend of no American."

"We know that now," said Mr. Harding, and repeated to Billy that which the telephone operator had told him earlier in the day.

Marching Pesita and his men ahead of them Billy and the others made their way to the rear of the office building where the horses of the bandits were tethered. They were each armed now from the discarded weapons of the raiders, and well supplied with ammunition. The Chinaman and the loyal Mexican also discovered themselves when they learned that the tables had been turned upon Pesita. They, too, were armed and all were mounted, and when Billy had loaded the remaining weapons upon the balance of the horses the party rode away, driving Pesita's live stock and arms ahead of them.

"I imagine," remarked Bridge, "that you've rather discouraged pursuit for a while at least;" but pursuit came sooner then they had anticipated.

They had reached a point on the river not far from Jose's when a band of horsemen appeared approaching from the west. Billy urged his party to greater speed that they might avoid a meeting if possible; but it soon became evident that the strangers had no intention of permitting them to go unchallenged, for they altered their course and increased their speed so that they were soon bearing down upon the fugitives at a rapid gallop.

"I guess," said Billy, "that we'd better open up on 'em. It's a cinch they ain't no friends of ours anywhere in these parts."

"Hadn't we better wait a moment," said Mr. Harding; "we do not want to chance making any mistake."

"It ain't never a mistake to shoot a Dago," replied Billy. His eyes were fastened upon the approaching horsemen, and he presently gave an exclamation of recognition. "There's Rozales," he said. "I couldn't mistake that beanpole nowheres. We're safe enough in takin' a shot at 'em if Rosie's with 'em. He's Pesita's head guy," and he drew his revolver and took a single shot in the direction of his former comrades. Bridge followed his example. The oncoming Pesitistas reined in. Billy returned his revolver to its holster and drew his carbine.

"You ride on ahead," he said to Mr. Harding and Barbara. "Bridge and I'll bring up the rear."

Then he stopped his pony and turning took deliberate aim at the knot of horsemen to their left. A bandit tumbled from his saddle and the fight was on.

Fortunately for the Americans Rozales had but a handful of men with him and Rozales himself was never keen for a fight in the open.

All morning he hovered around the rear of the escaping Americans; but neither side did much damage to the other, and during the afternoon Billy noticed that Rozales merely followed within sight of them, after having dispatched one of his men back in the direction from which they had come.

"After reinforcements," commented Byrne.

All day they rode without meeting with any roving bands of soldiers or bandits, and the explanation was all too sinister to the Americans when coupled with the knowledge that Villa was to attack an American town that night.

"I wish we could reach the border in time to warn 'em," said Billy; "but they ain't no chance. If we cross before sunup tomorrow morning we'll be doin' well."

He had scarcely spoken to Barbara Harding all day, for his duties as rear guard had kept him busy; nor had he conversed much with Bridge, though he had often eyed the latter whose gaze wandered many times to the slender, graceful figure of the girl ahead of them.

Billy was thinking as he never had thought before. It seemed to him a cruel fate that had so shaped their destinies that his best friend loved the girl Billy loved. That Bridge was ignorant of Billy's infatuation for her the latter well knew. He could not blame Bridge, nor could he, upon the other hand, quite reconcile himself to the more than apparent adoration which marked his friend's attitude toward Barbara.

As daylight waned the fugitives realized from the shuffling gait of their mounts, from drooping heads and dull eyes that rest was imperative. They themselves were fagged, too, and when a ranchhouse loomed in front of them they decided to halt for much-needed recuperation.

Here they found three Americans who were totally unaware of Villa's contemplated raid across the border, and who when they were informed of it were doubly glad to welcome six extra carbines, for Barbara not only was armed but was eminently qualified to expend ammunition without wasting it.

Rozales and his small band halted out of range of the ranch; but they went hungry while their quarry fed themselves and their tired mounts.

The Clark brothers and their cousin, a man by the name of Mason, who were the sole inhabitants of the ranch counseled a long rest—two hours at least, for the border was still ten miles away and speed at the last moment might be their sole means of salvation.

Billy was for moving on at once before the reinforcements, for which he was sure Rozales had dispatched his messenger, could overtake them. But the others were tired and argued, too, that upon jaded ponies they could not hope to escape, and so they waited, until, just as they were ready to continue their flight, flight became impossible.

Daily News Letter

General News and Gossip from Staff Writers at Home and Abroad.

TODAY—Kenneth Harris, Kansas City, Mo., writes of the city's first "debutante bank director," of the demand for prohibition enforcement, opposition to repeal of the anti-cigarette law, and on other topics.

TOMORROW—"What will the women do?" has become the main issue in Chicago's forthcoming mayoralty race, writes John D. Mueller, correspondent in that city.

By KENNETH HARRIS
For International News Service

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 22.—Staid financiers of this Mid-Western city were somewhat astonished recently when they learned that a debutante had invaded their ranks in the role of a bank director. Stockholders of a suburban bank awarded Miss Frances Fleming—a pulchritudinous member of the country club "set"—the honor of being the first representative of the fair sex to grace the directorate of a bank in the "show-me" state.

All of the other members of the board of directors of the Corn Exchange bank, to which Miss Fleming was elected, are men. Friends of the pretty young woman predict she will be a success.

Week after week local ministers scathingly denounce the law enforcement agencies of this city, who, they declare, are making no attempt to enforce the prohibition law. Dovetailing with these claims is the assertion of the Rev. W. S. Foreman, assistant State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, who declared heatedly: "Kansas City is wide open! In fact, it is the wettest city in the state!"

When pressed as to his authority for such statements, Reverend Foreman casually remarked that a corps of his investigators have proved them.

The minister urged that the church inject itself into politics. When this is done bootleggers, "booze dives" and drug stores which dispose of liquor illegitimately will be forced to make hasty moves to other regions, he said.

Noon dancing is the rage in Kansas City these wintry days. Two downtown hotels have inaugurated the custom, which is so popular throughout the effete east. Many business men have found that indulgence in Terpsichorean revels at their lunch hour puts them in fine fettle for the afternoon "grind" at the office.

---

A unique show, sponsored by the Women's Commercial club, was staged here recently. Booths, featuring every activity in which women are engaged, were festively decorated for the occasion. The club is composed of women who are in business for themselves or who occupy executive positions in the business world.

Exhibits of milliners, dressmakers, insurance and realty dealers, brokers and beauty specialists were displayed.

A state-wide movement to aid maimed unfortunates to help themselves is being conducted in Kansas City by F. R. Bigler, who, although minus an arm and a leg, has made a marked success in business. Bigler has had wide experience in placing maimed and deformed men in both industrial and governmental positions.

Fourteen crippled persons have thus far filed their names, together with an outline of their abilities, with Bigler. Bigler said he would instruct these unfortunates how to overcome their handicaps and then aid them in securing jobs.

"The crippled person nearly always proves to be of invaluable aid to his employer," Bigler said. "He realizes he must use his head to supply the deficiencies of his body. Therefore, he is a success, because he thinks."

A broad, expansive smile flitted over the face of Jack Lile, "hot dog" vendor, when an employe of the local gas company sought to dislodge him from the "stand" he had taken in front of the company's offices.

A broad sombrero, slanted at a rakish angle decorated his head, and clutched gently in each hand was a puppy, not more than a month old.

Demonstrator radiators were selling out in front of the company's offices.

"Move along with your dogs!" admonished an employe.

"Here's my occupation license," countered Lile, waving a paper. "Can't you see I've secured 'protection?'."

Lile moved nearer the radiator, and when the employe asked him whether the animals were pedigreed, he said:

"Them dogs is so swell that if they could talk they wouldn't speak to either of us!"

From the other side of the Kansas ("Kaw") river reliable informants report that Kansans do not want the Anti-Cigarette law, which has been on the state statutes for some time, repealed. Mail of State Legislators at Topeka is being flooded with petitions signed by hundreds of persons, asking them to desist from all efforts to have that measure changed or modified in any manner.

The fact that the law has been widely violated in nearly every city throughout the "Sun Flower State" is no secret, it is said.

Uncle Wiggily Bedtime Stories

— By Howard R. Garis —

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE SOLDIER BOYS

Sammie Littletail, the rabbit boy, was hopping along over the snow-covered field when he met Johnnie and Billie Bushytail, the two squirrels.

"Where are you going, Sammie?"

"I'm going to Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow," answered Sammie, trying to twinkle his small pink nose as Uncle Wiggily did his larger one. 'He asked me to come over for he has a surprise."

"That's just what he sent word to us about," chattered Billie, frisking his bushy tail. "Oh, I wonder what it's all about?"

"Isn't it mysterious," gasped Sammie, and he and the squirrels ran along.

The three animal boys had not gone very far before they met Jackie and Peetie Bow Wow, the puppy dogs.

"Where are you going?" asked Jackie.

"To Uncle Wiggily's," answered Sammie. "Where are you puppies going?"

"Same place," remarked Peetie. "He sent word for us to come over, but he didn't say why."

"Just like for us," chattered Billie the squirrel.

As the animal boys raced away over the snow to Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow, from under some bushes slunk the Fox and Wolf.

"Did you hear what they said?" whispered the Fox.

"Yes," growled the Wolf. "I guess Uncle Wiggily is giving a party to the animal boys. Now, at a party there's always ice cream, and it is always left outside the back door to keep cool until it is ready to be served. Now when Uncle Wiggily opens the back door to get the ice cream we'll be hiding there and grab him."

"That's what we will!" said the Fox. 'We didn't catch him with the trap valentine, but we'll get him this way."

"No, that trap trick didn't work," agreed the Wolf. 'It only caught the Bob Cat. But this time we shall surely nibble his ears."

The Fox and Wolf sneaked around to the back door of the hollow stump bungalow of Uncle Wiggily. Sure enough there was a freezer filled with ice cream. The Fox and Wolf hid around the corner of the back stoop and waited with hungry mouths.

Meanwhile, inside the bunny rabbit's hollow stump bungalow. Uncle Wiggily was greeting the animal boys who had come in answer to his invitation.

"I suppose you chaps are wondering why I asked you to come here; aren't you?" asked Uncle Wiggily, twinkling his pink nose in a most jolly fashion.

'I know," barked Jackie Bow Wow, raising one paw as if he were in school.

"Why?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

'You—er—now—you—asked us here to eat ice cream. I saw Mr. Whitewash, the polar bear gentleman, leave a freezer full at the back door," barked Jackie.

"Well, that was one of the reasons," laughed Uncle Wiggily. "But there is another reason. I'll tell you about it." Then he talked for some time to the animal boys.

The Fox and Wolf hid.

and finally the dear old rabbit gentleman opened the back door to get the ice cream.

"Now's our chance!" whispered the Fox to the Wolf.

"Yes! Rush up and grab Uncle Wiggily by one ear and I'll get him by the other," said the Wolf. But just then out of the door came talk like this:

"All ready with your gun."

"Draw your sword!"

"Take aim!"

"Shoot the Wolf and Fox."

For a moment the bad chaps at the back stoop hesitated. Then the Fox cried:

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily has a lot of soldiers in there! They'll shoot us! Let's run!" And away they ran, nibbling no ears at all.

'Ha! Ha!" laughed the bunny as he saw the Fox and Wolf run away. "My soldier boys scared the bad chaps. Ha! Ha! It is only toy guns and swords that my animal soldier boys have.' And so it was. Uncle Wiggily had asked the animal chaps over for a little party and he gave them some toy swords and guns left from Christmas. And while waiting for the ice cream Sammie, Johnnie and the others pretended to be soldiers. They didn't even know the Fox and wolf were there when they talked about shooting them.

"Ha! Ha! It was a good joke!" laughed Uncle Wiggily, as he passed the ice cream. And it was; wasn't it?

And if the tack hammer doesn't try to drive a nail around the kitchen stove, making believe it's the milkman's horse, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's umbrella windows.

TEA ROOM HOLDS FORMAL OPENING

New Catering Concern Begins Business in Artistic Surroundings

Answering a popular demand for a catering concern in Glendale, the Harriet Mae Tea Room opens this evening to the public at its daintily decorated quarters in the new business block constructed on the corner of Harvard street and Maryland avenue.

Luncheons for busy business people, clubs and groups will feature the noonday service; in the afternoon social teas and parties will be featured; and in the evening a regular dinner bill will attract many families to the establishment, it is predicted by Harriet Mae, who presides over the place.

Home-Like Room.

There is space to accommodate fifty or sixty people in the private dining room. All of the fixtures follow one color scheme of ivory trimmed with blue. A home-like effect is gained by portieres, pictures and other "little things" which lend comfort to the eyes of discriminating diners.

Home cooking, including homemade bread and pastry, is a feature of the cuisine which will be highly appreciated, it is expected, and all of Glendale is invited to the formal opening this evening.

Predict Germany Will Make Peace Overtures

PARIS, Feb. 22.—France believes that Germany will back down completely and make overtures for a settlement of the Ruhr issue within the next two weeks, it was learned from a high authority.

Germany, it is understood, will attempt to have the Ruhr question placed in the hands of a commission in which Great Britain and the United States would be invited to participate.

France, from the day the Ruhr was occupied, has insisted upon direct negotiations between Berlin and Paris. This is still the government's attitude.

APPARATUS AND DEVICES

By RALPH BROWN, RADIO ENGINEER

VACUUM TUBE SOCKET

A vacuum tube socket must be more than a mere tube mounting device. It must meet with the most rigid requirements of radio. The socket illustrated is such an instrument.

The base is of heavy molded bakelite, providing adequate insulation. The springs are of bronze, nickel finished. They are so arranged as to make positive contact on the sides of the tube prongs. As a wiping, spring contact is made, a clean, positive connection is assured.

These contact springs are heavy enough to carry, without arcing or heating, the heavy filament current of the 5 watt oscillator tubes.

The tube and terminals of this socket are of brass with polished nickel finish. The arrangement of the base is such that this socket is adapted to any of the standard American four prong tubes, including those transmitting tubes which have the locating pin placed 45 degrees away from normal.

RADIO DEVELOPMENT

By Lieut John R. Irwin
U. S. Air Service (Reserve)

TELEPHONE RECEIVERS

The distinctive features of telephone receivers for radio work are lightness of the moving parts and employment of a great many turns of wire around the magnet poles. The lightness of the moving parts enables them to follow and respond to rapid pulsations of current. The large number of turns of wire causes a relatively large magnetic field to be produced by a feeble current. The combined effort is to give a very sensitive receiving device. Inasmuch as the size of the wire used is always about the same size (No. 40 copper), the amount of wire, and therefore the number of turns, is usually specified indirectly by stating the number of ohms of resistance in the coils. Telephone receivers of fair sensitiveness for radio work have about 1,000 ohms in each receiver (measured in direct current), while the better ones usually have 1,500 to 2,000 ohms per receiver. The most common type, called the magnetic diaphram type, has a U shaped permanent magnet with soft iron poles, so that it vibrates when the attraction is rapidly varied, producing sounds to correspond with the frequency of the pulsations of current.

The impedance of a telephone receiver to alternating current increases rapidly with frequency, and at radio frequency is so great as to permit no passage of current. By the use of detectors, however, the current that passes in the telephones consists of a series of pulses of audio frequency, usually from 500 to 1,200 pulses or vibrations per second. A typical telephone receiver having a direct current impedance of 2,000 ohms was found at 400 cycles per second to have an impedance of 2,900 ohms, and at 800 cycles per second an impedance of 3,900, rising to 4,400 ohms at 1,000 cycles per second. This is an excellent illustration of the ratio of the frequency to the resistance of the receivers.

The WORLD OVER
By FRANKLIN B. MORSE
PACIFIC SPORTS SERVICE

Eastern collegiate athletes are likely to meet their far-western rivals in many forms of athletic competition during the season of 1923 for, in no previous year, has there been so much preparation in the matter of sending various Pacific coast teams to the middle west and Atlantic seaboard.

The Olympic club of San Francisco will be the first to start the series of eastern invasions when it sends its three-man team of handballers to St. Paul, Minn., to compete in the national championships to be held there March 20. The men already have been selected through an elimination tournament and are keeping themselves fit. They are considered as among the best men the coast has to offer in this sport.

In rowing, it is almost a certainty that either the University of California or Washington university will be represented at Poughkeepsie. Much will depend on the result of their dual meet here as it is likely that only the winner will go east. On the other hand, should the race be a close one with only inches or feet between the crews at the finish, there is every chance that both crews would take the eastern trip. Last year Washington finished second to the Navy, which won the race. The year before California and the Navy placed in the same relative positions. Now that it is said that the Navy does not intend to compete at Poughkeepsie this year, both Washington and California are keen to be the first ones to step in and win this blue ribbon event.

Both Stanford and the University of California are likely to send track and field teams to compete in the intercollegiate track and field meet at Cambridge. California now has won the cup for the last two years and it is extremely anxious to get a third leg on the trophy and defend it. So it is almost a certainty that California again will be on hand, provided, of course, that the team lives up to expectations and has a fair chance of making a good showing. Graduation and failure in recent examinations has rather marred the chances of Stanford, but Coach Templeton still has the nucleus of a formidable team and there are some bright prospects.

Water polo championships to be held in the east also probably will be entered by a Stanford team in the event that it wins the Pacific coast championship. California is pressing it strongly and much depends on the next few weeks in this direction. Coronado Tent City is going strongly into water polo, having secured a coach to train the players but, as this is the first season in which Coronado has gone after this in earnest, it may be thought best to postpone national championship competition for another year.

California's usual galaxy of tennis stars including William Johnson, the Kinsey brothers and various collegiate champions will be seen again in eastern championships.

Kid Essex Wants Bout With Burbank Scrapper

"Kid" Essex is looking for trouble and wants to fight "Smiling" King, of Burbank, according to his manager, Lee McGuire, who claims for his principal a record of but two lost decisions in one hundred bouts, those that dropped by the wayside being won by Howard Kendig and Rex Hampton.

The Kid, who tips the scales at no more than 118 pounds, claims he can knock King "for a row of rouge-pots" in the first episode of a three-round argument.

Or if King won't fight, the Kid is perfectly willing to have another whirl with Hampton, the result of which is in no slightest doubt in his mind.

SPORTS CHATTER
By BILL UNMACK
PACIFIC SPORTS SERVICE

Entries for the Davis International challenge tennis cup have not come in as fast this year as they did last spring, but those in charge of the event are confident that before the entries close the record will have been broken for the number of aspirants for world tennis honors. At this writing it does not look as if the Americans would be dislodged from the present possession of the trophy, as all of last year's representatives will be available — minus, of course, a finger on the racquet hand of William J. Tilden. Thus far Tilden has not had a sufficient test to determine whether or not this will affect his play adversely.

To get out in February in the initial sprint of the year and cover the 100-yard dash in 9 4-5 seconds is something of an achievement, but this is what Charlie Paddock, world's champion sprinter, did recently when he won the event at the A. A. U. Occidental relay meet. The time made by Paddock is something of a feat in mid-season with all the attendants of warm weather and plenty of limbering up, but to do the stunt under the circumstances mentioned is not a little startling. There are some followers of track athletics who incline to the belief that Paddock is taking a chance of injuring himself by starting out at this pace in his maiden 1923 trip. And there is some reason for this fear.

A cable dispatch quotes Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, world's champion tennis player, with saying the following: "I'm glad Mrs. Mallory has come back for more. I hope she's able to play. I'll beat her more decisively than I did the last time. If I don't, I'll quit tennis forever."

It is not pleasant to think that any woman made such a statement. It is so unsportswomanlike that it is hard to credit it to a woman who is a champion, and there doubtless will be many who will believe the girl has been misrepresented in some way. A statement on white paper often may sound the very opposite from the spoken intent. We are familiar with the "Smile when you call me by that name" of the Virginian in Owen Wister's novel, and it may well be that the smile and twinkle in her eye when she spoke the words took all the barbs out of them. Unfortunately looks and inflections cannot be reproduced in type.

Certainly the world would like nothing better than to see the two best players of two continents get into the courts together again, but if that is the spirit with which the French girl is going into the fray, the sympathy of practically all the world will be with the American woman.

THREAT MISSIVES MAILED TO GREB

Poison Pen Letters Tell of Dire Fate If Champion Roughs Tunney

By DAVIS J. WALSH
For International News Service

NEW YORK, Feb. 22. — Threatening letters, couched in all manner of bellicose terms, have been sent to Harry Greb on the subject of his bout tomorrow night with Gene Tunney for the American light heavyweight championship.

The authors of these missives, anonymous as always, promise Harry a dire and terrible fate if he essays to become rough with Gene and the boxer has been forced to appeal to the state boxing commission for protection in the event that a demonstration against him develops.

Assurances to this effect were forthcoming immediately from William, the Iron Duke. He said that not only would the referee be sent into the ring to see that fair play prevailed, but that adequate protection would be afforded.

Will Protect Greb

"I assured Greb that he would be given every consideration," William declared, "and that neither he nor the referee was to be intimidated. There has been a lot of talk from the rival camp about Greb's foul fighting and it has even been said that Billy Gibson would demand that the referee insist that the rules be obeyed. That demand would be unnecessary. In the first place, all of our officials are appointed with just that idea in mind. In the second place, Greb has fought from one end of the country to the other for years, and as far as I know, he has never been disqualified for fouling. His record there speaks for itself."

Just who inspired the writing of the letters is not known. Tunney has a big following in New York and many of them are self-elected friends. He, of course, knows nothing of the matter.

LEGION QUINTET DROPS L. A. GAME

Visiting Team Wins Bitter Battle by Score of 35 to 17 Points

The basketball team of the Glendale American Legion Post, Number 127, brought its season to a close last night in the local high school gymnasium by dropping a hard-fought contest to the fast Los Angeles Y. M. C. A. heavyweight quintet, the final score being 35 to 17. Although there was plenty of action from start to finish the strain of the recently completed American Legion league schedule was markedly evident, and as a result the locals were outplayed in practically every department of the game.

The half ended with the score card showing the "Y" boys in the lead by a 13 to 6 tally. Glendale's only spurt of the evening was made immediately after the last half started, bringing the score up to 10 before their opponents were aware of what was happening.

Sandusky, playing center, and Curtis at guard were the outstanding stars of the winners, while "Slim" Clanin was the whole show for Al Wheelon's aggregation. The line-up:

Los Angeles Y. M. C. A.—Forwards, Dorst and Reubenfire; guards, Curtis and Bernard; center, Sandusky; substitutions, Peterson and McGee. Glendale Legionnaires — Forwards, Austin and Liggett; center, Bunker; guards, Keller and Dick; substitutes, Clanin, Wheelon and McGowan.

Pacific-Southwest Review

By H. NELSON, Manager Glendale Avenue Branch
Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings Bank

HERMAN NELSON

For the second time in the month of February the banks and many of the business houses of Glendale are closed in commemoration of the birthday of a president of the United States. Today is the 191st anniversary of the birth of George Washington, commander-in-chief of the Continental forces in the Revolutionary War, and first president of the United States.

WEBSTER'S TRIBUTE

Daniel Webster once paid the following tribute to Washington:

"Born upon our soil, of parents also born upon it, never for a moment having had sight of the old world, instructed according to the modes of his time, only in the spare, plain, but wholesome elementary knowledge which our institutions provide for the children of the people, growing up beneath and penetrated by the genuine influence of American society—living from infancy to manhood and age amidst our expanding, but not luxurious civilization, partaking in our great destiny of labor, our long contest with unreclaimed and uncivilized man—our agony of glory, the War of Independence—our great victory of peace in the formation of the Union, and the establishment of the Constitution, he is all—all our own; Washington is ours!"

WASHINGTON'S QUALITIES

In the many accounts of Washington's life, as in the lives of other of our famous leaders, there is a wealth of anecdote and personal recollection. Much of it is, doubtless, hearsay; the famous cherry tree story can never be definitely labeled truth or fiction. But all biographers unite in praise of the sagacity, humanity and keen understanding of men and affairs which were his. They agree that he led his country through the perilous times of its beginning in a way that shall ever command the devout thanks of its citizens.

Among the many qualities and virtues which commend him to his countrymen today is his thrift. Of his counsels to the people of his own time this may well be recalled by us now.

"Economy makes happy homes and sound nations. Instill it deep."

HIS FAREWELL ADDRESS

By many, Washington's farewell address is considered to give as true and complete an indication of his devotion to his country and thought for its future as any record he has left. The following excerpt will always be pertinent:

"As a very important source of strength and security, cherish public credit. One method of preserving it is to use it as sparingly as possible, avoiding occasions of expense by cultivating peace, but remembering also that timely disbursements to prepare for danger frequently prevent much greater disbursements to repel it; avoiding likewise the accumulation of debt, not only by shunning occasions of expense, but by vigorous exertions in time of peace to discharge the debts which unavoidable wars may have occasioned, not ungenerously throwing upon posterity the burden which we ourselves ought to bear. The execution of these maxims belongs to your representatives, but it is necessary that public opinion should co-operate. To facilitate to them the performance of their duty, it is essential that you should practically bear in mind, that towards the payment of debts there must be revenue; that to have revenue there must be taxes; that no taxes can be devised which are not more or less inconvenient and unpleasant; that the intrinsic embarrassment, inseparable from the selection of the proper objects (which is always a choice of difficulties) ought to be a decisive motive for a candid construction of the conduct of the government in making it, and for a spirit of acquiescence in the measures for obtaining revenue which the public exigencies may at any time dictate."

Ed Walsh Will Coach White Sox Ball Team

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—"Big Ed" Walsh, once famous pitcher for the White Sox, will return to the scene of his former conquests in the capacity of assistant coach, it was announced today. Walsh is expected to be a big help to Manager "Kid" Gleason in developing young pitchers.

"Big Ed" was the greatest idol the White Sox fans ever had. His pitching feats of 1906 and subsequent years are one of the marvels of the baseball world.

Walsh was an American league umpire last season but did not like the job. He will leave Monday night with the White Sox for Marlin Springs, Texas.

OTHER PEOPLE'S HUSBANDS

"You don't mean to say that Mr. Lowell was ever cross?"

Well, I don't know that you'd call him exactly cross but he was one of the most difficult men I ever saw. If everything about the house doesn't go perfectly he gives Mrs. Lowell fits. I don't mean he shouts or scolds, but he will be so cutting and cruel in his dignified way that I'd rather be scolded. And stingy! And hard to suit at the table! And she is a wonderful housekeeper and so economical. But he's never satisfied."

The Feet of Clay

"Why, it doesn't seem possible. He always seems so sweet-tempered! And he has such lovely manners. He always rises when a woman comes into the room and puts on his wife's overshoes, and that sort of thing. Why, we all thought he was a model husband and wished ours would be more like him."

"Well, you haven't lived with him and I have. That's the chief reason I stopped boarding there. He made the atmosphere so unpleasant."

"Just to think of it! And stingy, too. That must be terrible. I'm glad Dick isn't stingy. He'd give me his last cent and never ask me what I did with it."

He'll Wish He Hadn't

As you have already guessed, the above conversation took place between one of the Lowell's neighbors and an ex-boarder at the Lowell's home. The Lowells never took a boarder before, they did it this year because business was poor and the house so large since the daughter married and the son went to school.

Doubtless Mr. Lowell would wish they hadn't if he could hear his critic. That is, if he cares for his reputation as an ideal husband, and I fancy he does since he is always careful to maintain in public the manner that has given it to him.

I wonder how many such reputations would crash to the ground if the family should take a boarder.

Other people's husbands always seem more perfect than they are.

If one could be a fly on the wall of the homes where these model husbands live for a few days doubtless one would come home and say to one's husband: "Well, anyway, I am glad you're not mean, or irritable, or grouchy or untidy, like Mr. M."

They've Had To Be

Of course, this would apply the other way around, but I think it is more a masculine than a feminine habit to put on a more amiable manner outside the home.

The street angel house devil is almost always masculine. Perhaps economic necessities have molded men that way.

Other people's lots are never as rosy as they seem. Nor their husbands as easy to get along with. Of course, you wouldn't trade your husband for theirs, anyway, but you may think you would trade his faults. Like as not if you did you would be wishing to reverse the bargain.

Beauty Chats

Edna Kent Forbes

YOUNG MOTHERS' HINTS

I have tried in various talks to give a few useful beauty hints to prospective young mothers, and I have tried particularly to make them believe the theory that I have seen proved over and over again, that, far from spoiling one's beauty, having a child will often increase it.

Certain rules must be followed. The young mother must have sufficient rest or she will be dragged out and tired, and both figure and health will suffer. She must wear the proper sort of support, maternity belt, maternity corset, or abdominal belt, or the muscles will be dragged and strained and the young girl's charm of figure will depart. She must take care of her diet or her health and the baby's, to say nothing of her complexion, will suffer. She must use cleansing cream frequently and perhaps a nourishing cream as well, for the skin of the face and neck often becomes curiously dry.

She must use a tonic on her hair or this will suffer greatly. She should realy see a dentist every two months (or three, if her teeth are particularly sound) for much that goes normally to the hair and the teeth is diverted now into other channels. She must massage parts of her body with oil so the skin will stretch easily and more easily go back just as it was before.

Above all, she should keep in as tranquil and happy a frame of mind as possible, for this has nervous and physical reactions which affect her and, some people say, the coming child. She should not listen to the rather horrible "old wives' tales" which will only upset her. More progress, they say, has been made in the art of bringing children into the world in the last two years than in any other profession.

Blondy:—Vaseline or any oil will make your light hair appear to be darker while you are using it but this will not interfere with the shade permanently. Why not use a tonic that is better suited to your hair, one in which there are a number of ingredients. In such mixtures there will be oil and other things to cut it so the shade of the hair is not affected. If you need a formula for such a tonic, send me a s. a. e. and I shall be glad to mail it to you.

Elsa D:—Walking is only one form of exercise so, if you do not lose the 20 pounds this way, you should include other exercises that will bring all the muscles of the body into as much action as those used in walking. Take many deep breaths while you walk as this is as effective in consuming the fatty tissue as the exercises. Substitute whole wheat bread for that made from white flour and balance your diet by eating fruit, green vegetables and salads to offset the starchy foods.

Tomorrow—The Methodical Woman.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So, if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

A friend has just sent me her financial budget. She lives in a town in the State of Illinois. Prices there differ, naturally, from prices at other places. But, on her husband's salary of $38 a week, it is interesting to see how she manages:

PROPOSE WOMEN AS DRY SLEUTHS

Plan to Enforce National Prohibition Is Laid Before Harding

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The most novel plan yet brought forward to enforce prohibition was carried to the White House by Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the governor of Pennsylvania, who has embarked upon a campaign to dry up all the oases in the Keystone state.

Mrs. Pinchot proposed to President Harding that he put prohibition enforcement entirely in the hands of women, discarding most of the men sleuths now on the payrolls.

"This is no joke," said Mrs. Pinchot, when she emerged from the president's office. "I am serious. I can get five thousand suitable women at once to enforce the prohibition laws—and they will enforce them, too. They won't be subject to the bribes that are now such a scandal in prohibition enforcement.

Catch Big Fellows.

"I laid the proposition before President Harding. He told me he would take it up with Commissioner Haynes."

The lady enforcement agents would not be content with home brewers and moonshiners, either, the first lady of Pennsylvania asserted. They would go after the "big fellows," the men who get thousands of gallons of liquor out of bond on forged and fraudulent permits.

The present trouble with prohibition enforcement, Mrs. Pinchot thought, is that dry agents pay too much attention to the cellar expert and not enough to the "big, powerful interests" that are behind withdrawals and smuggling enterprises.

Diet and Health

By Lulu Hunt Peters, M.D.

Author of "Diet and Health, with Key to the Calories"

ASTHMA DUE TO CAT AND DOG HAIR

The following letter, written by a doctor, appeared in the American Medical Association Journal of January 7, 1923. I reproduce it nearly verbatim for your benefit. I shall be glad if you will write me if you get any results by following the course this doctor did:

"At the age of 6 years, my parents noticed that I had considerable difficulty in breathing. This was thought to be due to a pair of very large tonsils, which almost entirely close the aperture in my throat. Tonsillectomy and adenectomy were performed at this time, but my asthma persisted and was then recognized as bronchial asthma. From this time, I suffered with frequently recurring attacks of more or less severity. I scarcely knew the meaning of a good night's sleep and, at times, I was unable to go to bed at all, but was forced to spend the night in a chair.

"My first real relief was obtained by a visit to Atlantic City. At the time, I was having a very severe attack; but my asthma left me immediately on arriving in Atlantic City, and I was completely free during the entire time I was there. When I returned home, my asthma came back almost immediately. This experience has been repeated innumerable times since then; my asthma invariably left me when I went to Atlantic City, and I remained free while there, with the exception of a few isolated attacks; but when I returned home my asthma, just as surely, came back again.

"My physician explained this on the assumption that the climate of Washington was unfavorable for my trouble. This assumption was later proved to be erroneous. In 1913 he moved to a new residence in the same neighborhood, and I was entirely free from asthma for a period of two years, though exposed to identical climatic conditions. In 1915, my asthma returned and was as bad as ever.

"I tried calisthenics, deep breathing, long walks, cold baths, sleeping out doors, vegetarian diet and fasting, but my asthma persisted in spite of all.

"In 1919, while an interne in the Atlantic City Hospital, I heard and read something about protein sensitization as applied to asthma. I obtained some twenty-five food proteins, with which I tested myself, but they all gave negative results.

"When I returned to Washington, additional skin tests were made and I gave a marked reaction to dog-hair protein. I then went to Philadelphia and was thoroughly tested. I was found to be sensitive to dog-hair, cat-hair, and horse dandruff. To all others I gave a negative response.

"The explanation of my case is simple. At our former residence we always had a number of cats, which were the cause of my asthma at that time. My two years of freedom in Washington, from 1913 to 1915, were due to the fact that we got rid of our cats when we moved. In 1915, someone gave us a dog, which started my asthma again as badly as ever. Going to Atlantic City merely meant getting away from cats and dogs. The few isolated attacks occurring in that city could be traced directly to intimate exposures to cats or dogs.

"We got rid of our dog, and I treated myself with gradually increasing injections of dog-hair protein. Since then I have been entirely free from asthma.

"After being a martyr to asthma for twenty-two years, I am now well."

Parents of Murdered Boy to See Hanging

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Feb. 22.—Sheriff Tobin has issued passes to Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Bernhard to admit them to the hanging of Paul Apolani on Friday. Apolani will die for the brutal murder of the Bernhards' 4-year-old son, Theodore, on August 16, 1921.

"He took my little boy away from me," Mrs. Bernhard told the sheriff when she asked for the passes, "and I want to see him die. When I see his body hurtled through the trap it will be the realization of all my hopes; since little Theodore went away."

THEATRES

The GLENDALE

"If I Were Queen," featuring Ethel Clayton, is the picture showing today at the Glendale Theatre. The story was directed by Wesley Ruggles and is distributed by F. B. O., one of the recent large amalgamations of "Film Row."

The action is laid in a mythical kingdom in the Balkans. It deals with the days before royalty occupied its present lowly position in world affairs, and has been pictured in a series of beautiful scenes that serve to add color to Du Vernet Rabell's vivid story.

If you remember the charm of "Beverly of Graustark," you will have some idea of the romantic appeal of this interesting film.

Alaska covers an area nearly twice as large as that of the thirteen original colonies.

The T. D. & L.

"Java Head," by Joseph Hergesheimer, which ran as a serial novel in The Saturday Evening Post, is now showing in film form at the T. D. & L. Theatre.

The picture, distributed by Paramount, is superbly directed by George Mulford, and the fine cast includes Leatrice Joy, Jacqueline Logan, Raymond Hatton and George Fawcett.

If you would be interested in a tale of far-off adventure, of a Yankee skipper who brought back a beautiful Chinese wife, the flash of knives in Shanghai, a palanquin strangely in the midst of it, the discovery of the exquisite beauty within the silken curtains, and above all, what the skipper's "Lady Fair" says and does when she sees the strange girl from China—if these things thrill you, see "Java Head."

Features of the bazaar are in charge of: Acacia Avenue P.-T. A., cooked food; Colorado Street P.-T. A., hot dogs and coffee; Central Avenue P.-T. A., aprons; Columbus Avenue P.-T. ## Boys Fill Crime Ranks Says Veteran Sleuth

M. M. Freeman, dean of Seattle detectives, was in Glendale yesterday afternoon calling on his friend of former years, James M. Rhoades, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. Many were their reminiscences of the Northwest.

Mr. Freeman came south to return Maurice F. Brown, alleged kidnaper, who was captured in San Diego, and another prisoner to be taken from Los Angeles as soon as the requisition papers can be completed.

In discussing crime conditions this veteran of police work says the "old crooks" have got ashamed of themselves and retired. Nineteen out of twenty criminals are youngsters, mostly boys in their twenties, who turned bad during the period of the war.

CHINA HAS CHOP SUEY JOINT NOW

Former Chinese Cook in U. S. Navy Introduces Dish To Celestials

By EDNA LEE BOOKER
For International News Service

SHANGHAI, Feb. 22.—Extra—the first real American chop suey house in China has been opened in Shanghai by "Eddie," formerly a Chinese cook in the United States navy.

Tourists, fed up on fiction tales about Fair Cathay, and having seen plenty of chop suey restaurants in San Francisco before sailing, demand chop suey when they go to a Chinese feast in China.

Course after course is brought—often from forty to fifty—but the expectant tourists wait in vain for the Chinese boys to bring on the chop suey.

There are shark fins, bird nest soup, roasted pork and chestnuts, Eight Precious Things pudding, Mandarin duck, hundred-year-old eggs, bamboo shoots, water chestnuts, white cabbage, piegon-egg soup—dish after dish—but no chop suey.

American Dish

For, so far as we can find out, chop suey is an American dish rather than a Chinese one.

So great is the demand for chop suey by American tourists, however, that "Eddie," one of the cleverest Chinese business men in town, has opened a gorgeous restaurant patterned after those picturesque chop suey palaces in San Francisco.

The gold-and-red-lacquer sign over the door reads: "Real American Chop Suey Sold Here."

"Eddie" in his travels has learned to make chop suey, and he will teach his No. 1 Cook the secret. But, says Eddie, if he cannot get the real American chop suey flavor he will send to San Francisco and import a Chinese cook from one of the very best Chinatown restaurants.

Chinese Sights

There are certain sights that every tourist must see and certain things he must do while in the Orient, or all of his friends "back home" will be more or less doubtful as to his really having been in China.

He must see the Great Wall, be captured by a bandit, or at least nearly captured, peep into an opium den, weep in sympathy for the woman with bound feet, ride in a ricksha and eat chop suey.

Some of these feats are possible and some of them are not. But, thanks to Eddie, the tourist and the foreign residents who cultivated a taste for chop suey in New York and San Francisco Chinatowns, will not be disappointed as to the chop suey feature of their program of "things to do in China."

JAPS WILL SEEK U. S. FRIENDSHIP

Government to Steer Clear of Discordant Issues, Says Ambassador

By HARRY L. ROGERS
For International News Service

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Despite tremendous pressure from influential sections of Japanese public opinion the Japanese government will continue its policy of avoiding all issues calculated to stir up discord between Japan and the United States, it was learned officially.

Ambassador Hanihara, the newly-appointed representative of Japan, who has just arrived in Washington, will make no effort to change the treaty relations of the two countries when the 12-year term of the present treaty expires in July, and the convention will automatically continue in force.

Having been a member of the Japanese delegation to the Washington conference, Ambassador Hanihara is peculiarly fitted for carrying out the American policies of Prime Minister Kato, who headed that delegation, and he is in thorough sympathy with the premier's program of cordial friendship and understanding with the United States.

Would Revise Pact

Much opposition has been roused in Japan as to the terms of the existing commercial treaty, and a vigorous campaign is being conducted to force the Kato government to insist upon revision of its terms to permit Japanese in the United States to own land, to become naturalized and in general to be received on the same basis as Europeans.

At the head of the new movement is an organization known as the Taibei Doshikai, which has for its principal purpose "the relief from persecution" of Japanese in the United States, numbering among its members heads of Chambers of Commerce of some of the principal cities, members of parliament, publicists and other influential Japanese.

Vote Money to Build New Link in Highway

SHADYSIDE, Ohio, Feb. 22.—Belmont county commissioners voted $50,000 for a new Ohio river road between this place and Powhatan, thus matching an equal sum given by the state. This will be one of the links in the proposed Pittsburg-Cincinnati highway.

COMMENT THAT'S ALL

Laws Make Criminals
Why So Much Court?
Eugenics Bill Killed
Teach Truth About George

—By Gil A. Cowan—

ERNEST THOMPSON SETON—you all know him of Woodcraft fame—in talking before the Rotary club of Pasadena yesterday on the subject of Boys' Work, said: "You can't hang all of the judges."

The inference was that most judges need hanging. And to make matters worse, Mr. Seton, or is it Mr. Thompson now? told the Rotarians that while only one out of 2000 boys are born with criminal tendencies, 750 out of every 1000 men have broken laws or have made a failure in life, according to his friend, Judge Ben Lindsey.

In explaining why there are so many juvenile criminals, Mr. Thompson Seton avers the energetic youngsters get into mischief, come before harsh judges and then "it's all off with them for the rest of their lives." That is a short way of telling the whole story.

The present legal and judicial and law enforcement divisions of our government are designed to make criminals. Lawyers write the statutes. That takes a lawyer to prosecute or defend the helpless one indicted. Then it takes a third lawyer to interpret the laws and a fourth and fifth lawyer to pass upon the judgment.

A layman has no more opportunity, without a lawyer, in getting American fair play in American courts than he has of flying without an airplane. Let this be considered no attack on the legal profession. It is nothing more than a recital of facts as seen through uncolored glasses. Any city, county, state or nation needs lawyers and more lawyers. It must have judges and juries, defenders and prosecuting attorneys.

But California and the United States in general need fewer and better laws, less and kindlier justice, finer and more discerning public officials, if any of us are to escape violating one or more statutes every day of our lives; and the unfortunate ones who are caught escape criminal careers.

Too much is being done nowadays in the name of "justice" Family disputes are aired in court where all that is really necessary is a contract of divorce and a satisfactory partition of property, if the easy divorce is to maintain in this country.

Motor vehicle regulation need not be a matter for the courts unless a hearing is demanded. Does anyone for one minute believe traffic courts to be more than collection agencies?

The officer's word is inviolate. the officer's discretion is usually lost in an adamantine disposition provoked by abuse of both his superiors, who demand results, and the public, which demands privilege.

A published schedule of assessments for speeding—not fines; a penalty for lack of lights; a penalty (not a fine), for the privilege of parking too long in a given place—those are a few of the things which might be incorporated in regulations and relieve high-minded men, good women and girls or boys from being called to the bar, and called liars and laid liable to jail sentence.

For instance, it is worth a dollar to anyone caring about themselves or their machine to know the tail light is out. At times it is worth $10 to travel through a 20-mile zone at 30 miles. There is no need for a judge in such cases unless there is evidence and proof that a wrong is being done in collecting such money.

And there isn't a great deal of use in wasting space on this subject because the public is not organized to change the laws.

By a narrow margin, the Wisconsin state senate yesterday defeated the Barber eugenics bill to compel women to undergo a physical examination before marriage. The measure was denounced as calculated "to drive the blush from the maiden's cheek."

Such rot as does get before our legislature nowadays! Before any eugenics law is passed by any group of lawmakers the latter ought to be confined to the psychopathic ward of an insane asylum for thirty days' observation.

Yet there is basis for desire to legislate along such lines when young people will get married on a dare after ten minutes' courtship. And there is wisdom in the proposed law before the California legislature that ten days' notice must be given by contracting parties to marriage.

While it would not be chivalrous, to say the least, for the young man or woman—or older folks for that matter—to demand references, they certainly should do a little investigating and find out what sort of a family tree on which the fruit of their love is found.

It calls to mind the recent escapade of a debonair youth who wrote his fiancee he was hurrying east to attend "mother's funeral" when the facts in the case revealed him to be an alleged thief in the toils of the law.

So much for that. You have your own ideas on the subject and may the discussion after dinner wax warm.

This is another anniversary of George Washington's birthday. Little or nothing new has developed with regard to the "father of his country" since February 22 of last year. We asked several Glendale men to tell something about the nation's first president and the indelible, carbon copied, ditto, repetition was "he never told a lie."

Perhaps George Washington never did tell a lie, but more lies have been told about him, as a result, than a real history could correct in a dozen volumes.

George Washington was a great man because he was great. He was a leader because he led. He attended church because attending church was the custom. He told no lies because he knew "truth will out." He camped at Valley Forge because it was the best place to camp. He stayed with his men there only because his men would be more apt to stay by him.

Those are truisms. George Washington told the truth. Why should we not tell the truth about him? His education and experience made him great, his natural ability and decisiveness made him a leader, and so on. There is no need of painting him as a pious man, for piety in those days was peculiar to the Colonial age. There is no need to tell the children he was any braver than others of his rebel army. Almost all were brave. With few exceptions all had a price on their head and would rather have frozen to death slowly than been shot by the Tory or British guns, which ought to illustrate the point plainly.

In George Washington, however, we find one outstanding typical man among men whose birthday each year reminds us of the price of liberty!

BOOTLEG BUYERS DREAD EXPOSURE

List of Remington's Clients In Police Hands May Be Made Public

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 22.—Society circles of Southern California and the cinema colony of Hollywood were wondering today whether the police department would make public the list of 200 "customers" found among the papers of Earl Remington, murdered clubman, and which was said by detectives investigating the case to be a compilation of the names of persons to whom Remington sold smuggled and home manufactured liquor.

Piecing together the story told to them during a four hour questioning of Mrs. "Peggy" Remington, the widow, and information they have obtained through other sources, the detectives said today it apparently was Remington's custom to give a prospective purchaser a drink of real Scotch whiskey in his palatial home and then sell and deliver to him whiskey of an inferior grade.

The detectives were concentrating their efforts on tracing reputed bootlegging associates of Remington. There is one man especially they would like to locate. Remington and this man, Mrs. Remington is said to have told the police, had a violent quarrel over the telephone two days before Remington was found murdered in the driveway of his home.

TUT PROVES APE THEORY FALLACY

Bryan Claims Discovery in Luxor Tomb Refutes Darwin's Belief

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH
For International News Service

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—King Tut doesn't seem to have been any nearer the ape than the Rev. Percy S. Grant!

That from William Jennings Bryan, who tells the intellectual world it is dead wrong in the theory man sprung from the worm and monkey.

Bryan was jubilant today over the discoveries in the Egyptian tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen. It fixes as a certainty that man was through "evoluting" from the monkey stage nearly five thousand years ago, Bryan said.

That proven, Colonel Bryan feels he has a powerful additional argument to support his anti-Darwinian theory.

"It is difficult to draw conclusions until you get all the facts," Colonel Bryan commented on the work of the archeologists. "So far, however, the discoveries seem to indicate a highly advanced state of civilization, even at that remote period. There was evidently a belief in immortality —a belief in God.

Raps Evolutionists

"King Tut-Ankh-Amen appears to have been a man no nearer to the monkey stage than the Rev. Percy S. Grant, who recently denied the divinity of Christ."

Here the "great commoner" exhibited the keenest mirth. He took this shot at the evolutionists:

"If a man came from the ape he must have quit coming before the Egyptian king took the throne. Man seems to have arrived on our earth a good while ago, judging from the fact his civilization of three thousand years before Christ was in quite a high state of progress."

Wins $850 Verdict for Loss of Diamond Ring

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 22.—As the result of the mysterious disappearance of a diamond ring, valued at $850, Mrs. Florence Bell was awarded judgment for that amount by Superior Judge Burnell in her suit against James C. Davis, United States director-general of railroads in 1919. The ring vanished while being shipped from Los Angeles to New York, it was stated.

Popular Priest Is Installed by Glendale Council at Regular Meet

Installation of Father James S. O'Neill as chaplain was the feature last night of the regular meeting of the Glendale Council, Knights of Columbus, at the club house at 330 East Lomita avenue. Over 100 Knights were present and enthusiastically applauded the installation of Father O'Neill. In response Father O'Neill gave a short address of appreciation. Grand Knight Harry Girard presided over the meeting.

Of particular interest were the reports on the athletic activities of the council. Marcelus Doll, manager of baseball, reported that the Glendale K. C. nine is leading all southern California K. C. teams, having lost only one game.

Athletic Program

Fred Huesman, manager of bowling, reported that the Glendale bowlers had defeated a Los Angeles K. C. team last week and that the Glendale K. C. team is to be entered in the national K. C. bowling tournament next month.

The Knights are planning a broad athletic program and are looking forward to putting a football team in the field in the fall.

Past Grand Knight Leslie F. Wright announced that the new K. C. council at San Fernando will be inaugurated next Monday night at 8 o'clock. Mr. Wright and twenty other members of the Glendale Council, who live in San Fernando, have resigned in Glendale to enter the new council. Glendale Knights are planning to attend the meeting Monday night in full force.

DISCUSS TRAFFIC PROBLEM OF CITY

Members of Exchange Club Appoint Committee to Make Investigation

Several matters of community interest were discussed in the dining room of the Citizens' Building yesterday noon at the weekly luncheon of the Exchange Club.

Diverting traffic bound for Los Angeles over San Fernando road to Doran street and then down Brand boulevard was suggested by W. C. Waring of 201 South Brand boulevard, who stated that he had investigated the subject. He expressed an opinion that many motorists traversing San Fernando road do not know when they are in Glendale. He said he thought that the proper arrangements at the end of Doran street would send at least seventy per cent of the traffic over to Brand boulevard and so right through Glendale.

Burbank's predicament in having San Fernando road, a through artery of travel, pass directly through its business district, was mentioned by Fred S. Hill of 137 South Orange street. He said that this street was so congested with through traffic that it was difficult for the residents of Burbank to make use of their own business district. He asserted that the congestion on Brand boulevard was bad enough already.

Special Committee.

R. E. Johnston of 444 South San Fernando road suggested that giving motorists an opportunity to see more of Glendale probably would result in more of them coming here to establish homes.

A special committee to investigate the subject further and take it up with the City Council was appointed, consisting of W. C. Waring, G. C. McConnell, 638 East Broadway, and Attorney W. C. Anspach of 111 East Broadway.

After some discussion in regard to traffic conditions in Glendale, George H. Thomas of 104 North Brand boulevard was requested to invite Col. J. D. Fraser, chief of police, to addreess the club in the near future.

Vigorous objection was made by several members of the club to the number of arrests for violations of the traffic ordinance.

Attorney George H. King of 106 East Broadway denounced the motorcycle officers' traps to catch speeders. He said that motorcycle officers undoubtedly were obligated to either make a certain number of arrests or lose their jobs.

Fail to Solve Problem.

E. B. Sutton, proprietor of the Nash Agency at 112 South Maryland street, remarked that the Automobile Dealers' Association had discussed this problem a number of times, but had been unable to agree upon any solution. He reported that county motorcycle officers were expected to make twenty arrests a day and that, if they made less, they were in danger of losing their jobs, and that, if they made more, their life was made unpleasant by their associates. He said that any of them could make the required number of arrests in about an hour and a half.

The number of police tags being issued because northbound motorists on Brand boulevard fail to cross the Pacific Electric right of way at Gardena avenue also was the subject of protest.

D. Ripley Jackson of 1800 South Brand boulevard stated that he had been observing traffic conditions Sunday afternoons at the intersection of San Fernando road and Brand boulevard for some time and that the congestion was almost unbearable.

"If you had seen the congestion there last Sunday afternoon," he remarked, "you would wonder how a driver ever got through with his life. Another thing, there seemed to be a Southern Pacific train over that crossing about every fifteen minutes. The traffic was tied up in knots and every other way. I do feel that the police are doing their best to solve this problem."

Propose Subdivision.

R. E. Johnston, chairman of the civics committee, stated that he had received definite information from C. E. Kimlin, manager of the Glendale Sanitarium and Hospital, that its present site would be subdivided. Mr. Johnston said that undoubtedly the idea of a civic center having been put before the public which would make it easier to bring this subject up again.

Dr. Warren Z. Newton of 121 North Brand boulevard expressed his appreciation to those who have assisted him in the Boy Scout campaign.

Attorney W. C. Anspach, who was married recently, was not permitted to forget this fact when he showed up at the luncheon—half an hour late. He was promptly handcuffed and marched around the room attached to a huge chain, while Captain Jackson played a "combination" wedding march.
